GERMANS PLANNING FOR SUPPLYING THE RUSSIAN CAPITAL

Claimed That the Kaiser's Forces Are Making Progress in Their Efforts to Cross the Dvina River.

RVINA CONSIDERED KEY TO WHOLE RUSS FRONT

Should Germans Succeed in Crossing at Lennawada It Would Probably Mean Command of Riga Gulf and Shorter Way to Petrograd.

London, September 3.—The Germans today claim to have carried by assault the fortified bridgehead at Lennawada, on the Dvina river between Friedrichsstadt and Riga. This is considered the most critical point on the whole Russian front, for should the Germans cross the Dvina the Russians would be compelled to evacuate Riga and their position between the Dvina and the Baltic would be jeopardized.

However, the Germans do not yet claim to have crossed the river, which is being raging along the lower Dvina. The Russian frontiers are being held by General Ruzsky, who stopped the previous German advance on the Bura front of Warsaw.

Military critics believe the Russians will make a stubborn defense and say that should they fall here the German front probably would gain command of the Gulf of Riga and by landing troops at Pernau would shorten considerably the projected march to Petrograd, which is understood to be the ultimate German objective.

Ashley to Introduce Ordinance Preventing "Intimidation, Driving and Running Off Witnesses."

"POLICE STATION USED AS A LOAFING PLACE"

Officers Are Often "Interfered With in Proper Enforcement of Laws of the City," It Is Alleged.

Because, it is alleged, the recorder's court of Atlanta is infested with "runners" for lawyers and by those who intimidate and frighten witnesses, causing them to fail to appear in court, an ordinance will be introduced in council Monday, which, it is believed by those behind it, will go a long way toward putting an end to the practice.

DANGER IN TWO HEADS.
Council's school committee is to be congratulated upon its prompt recognition of the wrong it was about to perpetrate in its resolution urging council to abolish the office of principal of the proposed university high school system and to withhold the appropriation for it. The committee's action is unanimously rescinding that resolution, and thus leaving the city board of education unhampered in its efforts to build for Atlanta a splendid central high school system, which will be commended by all who desire to see that project successfully consummated. That means practically all Atlanta.

It is perhaps well that the matter came up at this time, as it will settle for the future the important principle as to whether the board of education should be responsible for the conduct of the public school system, or whether that responsibility shall be lifted from it in whole or in part by council.

There is not a question that as long as there is any doubt on this point the board will be seriously hampered in the execution of its forward plans, and the efficiency of the system will be undermined and in constant danger.

No public school system nor any other enterprise can be successfully and efficiently operated by two heads. With one undivided what the other does, the institution would be in continual hot water, and progress would be an unknown element.

The proposed university high school system, planned and arranged by the board of education, has commanded the universal approval of Atlantans. The project has been established upon a well-defined foundation, substantially laid by the board of education. For council to come in at this juncture and declare that the board should not put this or that part of the plan into operation would not only seriously cripple the enterprise, but probably render the entire plan inoperative.

It is a dangerous precedent to put two "bosses" in charge of any piece of work, it matters not if it involves only the digging of a ditch. There is even greater reason for avoiding it in connection with projects of great moment, because their possible failure would mean so much more. The same principle is applicable to the matter of interference by council with any administrative body in the discharge of its proper functions. The duties of such bodies are well defined by law, and where they depart from them there are other and more effective remedies than in attempting to assume their functions.

In this case the board of education has acted well within its power and authority. It has not only prepared a well-defined plan for a university high school plan, but it has made other changes in the general school system with a view to increasing its efficiency.

Instead of hampering the board by attempting to undo what it has done for the betterment of the system, council should give it the fullest and most cordial co-operation the coming year, and lend every assistance possible to the success of its efforts.

In this way Atlanta may build a school system which will again be the pride of the south, a distinction she once possessed but lost through scant support.

WAR'S BROTHERLY SIDE.
A story from the French and German trenches near Solonsais gives a brighter, brotherly side to the war.

This is shown in the letter of a London Globe correspondent, who says that it must not be thought that the soldiers who are thus so close together are continually firing or throwing grenades at each other. At certain times they wrap up in soft bundles and weighted with stones and tobacco. The other side the French are seen appearing among them, bearing the following message:

"Please let Corporal X know that his wife and children who live in the German lines, are quite well and send him their love."
The London paper calls these friendly messages "love tokens between foes."
When the men are not in the business of killing they recognize the claims of human brotherhood, and not a note of hate is heard from trench to trench.

THE ROAD TO PROSPERITY.
The "south can get rich feeding itself," says The Athens Herald, and therein points the road to real prosperity. The Herald speaks for the building up of farms in the Athens territory as sources of food supply for that market. Why should Athens go to the west for butter when Windsor and Commerce might easily supply it?

These and similar questions might be asked of the farm territory surrounding every city in the state prepared to become a substantial market for home grown supplies. Here is what The Herald says of the situation around Athens, and it applies with equal force to every other section of Georgia:

Hundreds of thousands of dollars a year can be kept at home by the community better to feed itself and live on its own products. Butter and milk and chickens and eggs and meat and chickens and meat can be a community bill that is fairly staggering. Suppose this money was banked in Athens each month of the year. It would double the money in the channels of local trade.

It is a fact that will enrich the rural business by building up the farm around Athens. The money will enrich the market.

Atlanta, Neb. also butter into Athens. How much better it would be for all of us to buy Windsor, Statham, Crawford, Elberton, Commerce and other neighboring towns were supplying the market with butter and eggs and butter that Athens consumes.

Athens ought to have a city market. It is a fact that will enrich the rural business by building up the farm around Athens. The money will enrich the market.

It is going to do it one of these days. This is a direct and specific statement of a general condition and a remedy for it, which The Constitution has sought time and again to impress upon the farmers of Georgia.

Georgia can get rich feeding herself, and so can the whole south. It is true that as a result of last fall's cotton crisis the south has come nearer to feeding itself this year, perhaps, than ever before in its history, but it has only made a good beginning. We must still import meat and feedstuffs from the north and west and chickens and eggs from Tennessee and other neighboring states.

Every dollar we send outside the state for food takes just that much away from our state trade balance. We grow cotton, sell it and then send the cotton money to some body else for food, three times out of ten we could make better at home.

When we learn to live at home, to feed ourselves almost wholly from home soil, then practically every dollar of our cotton money will be "retained." When we have done this we will have built a properly expressed in many figures that will "stay put."

THEY READ NEWSPAPERS NOW.
A new cry rises from the ranks of the Russian peasantry—something unheard until the peasant marched away to the world war, and that cry—now a popular demand—is for the newspaper.

A correspondent of the Associated Press says that every train stopping at a wayside station is besieged by peasants of both sexes and all ages, stretching their hands to the passengers and crying: "Give us a paper!"

That much, at least, for their enlightenment has been accomplished by the war, for it is said that heretofore the Russian peasant looked upon a newspaper as material for rolling a cigarette, but "now he reads it from beginning to end, and every bit of an old newspaper is received as a crust of bread by a starving beggar."

It has been said that Russia is "titled in the nineteenth century," and this is really the condition of the majority of Russian peasants. If, indeed, many of them are not as far removed as the sixteenth century from the light of modern advancement. They have not felt the need of the newspaper until now, and it is certain they will not be without its educative influences in future.

In The London Nation, recently, an article appeared dealing with the influence of newspapers that are persistently critical of England's attitude in the war. It is shown that the influence of some of the London newspapers, for instance, "is as dispiriting to the troops as a German victory a month."

The men are disheartened by the news of the German general depositions in the columns of their home papers, which the German editors do not fail to give wide circulation, since all that is weakened to the enemy is strength for them.

So the newspaper whose power, wisely administered, is a strength to a country in times of peace, may lose victories to the enemy when the very life of that country is at stake.

Grand Duke Nicholas received a note of congratulation from French officials. He had read as he ran.

Another excuse may be that the roads on the western front are too muddy for a big drive.

While Villa is resting up between battles, the peace talk doesn't disturb him at all.

Evidently the German idea in that winter campaign was to send the Russians sky-high.

Autumn's Spring Harvest
Autumn's spring "Harvest" while she scatters far and free
All the gold and silver that you ever hoped to see;
"Last rose of summer" wear a crown of gold;
Rejoice in the richness more than arms of you can hold!

Autumn days in Dixie,
Crowned with blessings sweet;
Where earth and heaven meet,
Where earth and heaven meet.

Autumn's spring "Harvest," while every field and stream
And woods are robed in beauty, are echoes of a dream;
Thrill of airy violins and all the earth as bright
As heaven itself would have it in its mysteries of light.

Autumn days in Dixie:
Sweet your dreams so true,
While angels of the Morning
Keep company with you.

Proverbs of the Highway.
When the world turns to the brighter side
There's always a pessimist to say "Told you so!"

Some folks are disappointed when they hunt Trouble and find Joy dancing in the place where Trouble ought to be.

No time is lost when you stop to count your blessings, for there is where you ought to be.

Though the world is made new every day,
It's the same old world at heart that it was when the apple tree looked good to Adam.

Premised Land.
The Promised Land's where Joy will stay
And Love knows not the time of day;
Where green hills bend the grazing deer
And rivers sing to match the birds;

Where twinkle many a friendly heart
And angelic plumes are on the air;
Where Peace goes singing on her way
And Love knows not the time of day.

A number of interesting articles appear in the Atlanta number which were written by well-known Atlantans, who are members of the association.

The first class will be held September 12, at the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and will be followed by the first lecture, which will be illustrated by slides. In addition to these lectures, which will continue indefinitely, the association will publish a monthly bulletin for the benefit of employees, who are out on the road at the time of the lectures.

ATLANTANS TO CHEER FRIENDLY HEROES IN FRENCH TRENCHES
Eighty-five French soldiers fighting in the European war will shortly receive letters of encouragement and sympathy from Atlantans. The letters, which are being prepared by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, will be sent to the French soldiers through the hands of the French consuls in Atlanta.

Workers in the office of Dr. P. E. May, executive secretary of the Georgia War Relief Association, are busy preparing letters of encouragement and sympathy for the French soldiers.

When Dr. May called Paris for names of the French soldiers, he was told that the people of Atlanta would take an interest in the French soldiers.

An going to call for more names," stated Dr. May.

GEORGIA HARVEST FESTIVAL
TO OFFER VARIED AMUSEMENT
TO THE PEOPLE OF GEORGIA

At a meeting held in President Beaumont Davis's office Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock, which was attended by the leading department stores and others, it was unanimously decided to hold the Georgia Harvest Festival, and that the festival should run from Monday, September 13, to Monday, November 15, and ending in a grand climax on Saturday night.

It was agreed that the Festival association should boost to its full capacity, not only its own particular events, but to advertise the Georgia Harvest Festival, and to have ready planned by other organizations to take place in Atlanta at the same time. Thus, the Georgia Harvest Festival will become a booster for the Southeastern fair, the corn show, the Harford cattle show, the educational meeting of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, and all other events by any organization in Atlanta.

At the close of the conference in President Beaumont Davis's office, General Manager Edwin Young of the Georgia Harvest Festival, issued the following statement:

"In deciding on the name, Harvest Festival, for the big series of events to be pulled off in Atlanta in November, the promoters of a new Georgia Harvest Festival, a series of events which are held in various European countries each fall, just at the close of the harvest season, and to take advantage of the nature of a season of joy and happiness, when the people have, in a large measure, finished their work and are ready to relax and enjoy themselves."
